Answers

Relative clauses exercises with answers: whose, where, which

1. who
   The verb helped comes right after the gap, so we use who. Whose comes before a noun.

2. where
   A hotel is a place, and the subject we comes next. So we use where, not which.

3. which
   A laptop is a thing, and the part has commas. So we use which, not that.

4. for
   We say look for, so for comes at the end. Don't add it: the key is already there.

5. what
   We mean the thing that you said, so we use what. We don't use that or which here.

6. whose
   It is the family's son, so we use whose. We don't use who with his.

7. which
   The verb has comes right after the gap, with no subject. So we use which, as for things.

8. which
   The part has commas and is about a thing, so we use which. That and what are wrong here.

9. for ... to
   We say wait for and talk to: for and to come at the end. We don't need it or him.

10. Tell me what you need.
    We mean the thing that you need: what. Then you need, as in a positive sentence.

11. He's a writer whose books I love.
    They are his books, so we put whose books after writer. Don't add them at the end.

12. where you were born
    For a place we use where. It already means in it, so don't add in. Which would need in at the end: which you were born in.

13. who ... that
    The first part has commas, so we use who. The second has no commas, so that is fine.

14. The people I work with are nice.
    We say work with, so with stays at the end. People is plural: are.

15. that
    After everything we use that or nothing, not what.

16. we stayed at

We say stay at a hotel, so at comes at the end. With where, don't add at.

17. What

We mean the thing that happened, so we use what. The verb comes right after it.
